Time travel - They are not as they tell us - First Part - Athena Swaruu

Gosia: I have this question. When you mentioned Tartary in one of the recent videos about Ukraine, some people picked up on it and said, "wait, you said there was no data recently. Now there is?" Could you explain then how you have come to know what you know about Tartary and where are these new data from? Only this. Because many people have asked me.

Swaruu X (Athena): Yes, it is that the new data comes from my investigations on Earth with data from Earth because Tartary is an Earth matter. And Federation does not have the data registered with the name of Tartary, but in translation they put it as HyperBoria of the South or non-Tsarist Russia, or Asian Empire.

And the dating is a mess so I couldn't place those "civilizations" recorded by the Federation as recent, as coming from Tartary. When I saw them, I placed them after the flood, and before the fall of the Roman Empire, with an error of two thousand years or more.

Another point to explain here that goes into the theme of Tartaria is what happens with the Sand Clock expeditions. Because you would think that we are just going to see and that's it.

And that is true, the problem is that once there we cannot easily place ourselves in a time frame. Because our ships do not have their navigation computer programmed as the inhabitants of Earth have been indoctrinated, as in movies like Wells's Time Machine or Spielberg's Back to the Future by entering a date into the machine, as in years, months, days and hours, minutes and seconds.

It is done by programming an energetic position, a frequency in an energetic map of frequencies. That is, the matter at that point of a stellar map by frequency is found in such or such a configuration.

Because the movement in time implies that the matter and energy of a place change the dynamics of interaction with each other. In other words, simply because at 09:15 minutes you have two things on your table, and at 09:16 you move a pencil from one place to another within the same table, there is a slight gravity displacement of the pencil's mass that is recorded as a specific moment in time. Comparative mass-gravity point map between as it was at 09:15 and as it was at 09:16. That is what is recorded in the navigation computers, not dates.

So it is only known that it was 09:15 or 09:16 by mass-gravity correlation and not by the time on a clock. Therefore, when traveling to any place in time, it is not known what the real date is unless there is another reference.

But this is not to say that if you ask someone on the street wherever you land and they tell you the date it will correspond to what other people on the other side of the same world think simultaneously.

In addition to this, on Earth they add or subtract years to things, they invent historical events and people.

Creating an impossibility of understanding where you are within a time frame based on calendars and dates.

Because although you will register that you are going to see a character that human history places him in the year, let's say 1700, then you introduce the frequency map correlation with said year, so that later it turns out that the character either was invented to fulfill some agenda and narrative or simply said character lived on another date, which confuses your navigation computer.

This problem is made worse when two real people actually lived in the same year, say 1700, but the official history places them in very different years. Which makes the result an impossible-to-decipher date soup.

Only with data collected through multiple trips of many ships or the same one can begin to understand the time frame of the events. Again, by contrast or by correlation or comparison between the dates of an event and what the map indicates by frequencies and mass-gravity positions.

And what I've seen about it is that human history is totally made up just by using characters or events that they put at different times in history again to fulfill a narrative.

And not only do the times and dates not correspond, but everything happens in a much more compact time frame, meaning that what happened in the last 2000 years actually happened in less than 600 or even less. This mapping is in process.

It is said that history is written by the victors and that is not only the whole truth but it gets worse because said victors not only twist things to their advantage but openly and brazenly invent characters and situations that simply never happened, they also erase for I complete more people and events than if they happened but are simply uncomfortable for them or go against their narratives of population control and their agendas of imposing a belief system on the population with an eye to exploiting them.

This kind of data can only be found through the intervention of one or more spacecraft with time-jump capabilities that have been recording human history with frequency-mass-gravity maps. And the result is that it is now clearly seen that the entire narrative of where humanity came from, what happened, and what did not happen is totally false.

Robert: Sure. You would need the gravity maps of the area to be able to match the exact frequencies. Everything has gravity until us. No numbers and hours, all that is imprecise. wow!! Athena, nice explanation. Thank you very much. It's clear now.

Swaruu X (Athena): That's why the dates don't match, because everything is wrong.

Robert: The only thing that perhaps people wondered, with the Federation always here, how is it that they do not document the history of humanity with their drones?

Swaruu X (Athena): You have to go place by place in history relating a date with a frequency. And so you find that nothing fits, but nothing. Human history is false and is made of false writings and documents that have been introduced over time.

Gosia: That's why this hasn't been done all this time? I imagine the Federation would already have everything on record if they've always been here.

And a question somewhat linked to Robert's. But shouldn't there already be some markers registered on the ships to facilitate these jumps? Because I don't think that if you go, it's for the first time. Unless you want to go on some meaningless date where no one has ever gone before.

Swaruu X (Athena): Yes, there are, but not enough. On which Swaruupapriyananda had relied, for example, to make his first Sand Clock exploration jumps.

The problem is that even if something is registered as from the year 1700, it does not mean that everything else that is officially registered that happened in that same year actually happened in that year.

Robert: Yeah, like energy nodes or something.

Gosia: You are not here exploring as novices. Nor they.

Swaruu X (Athena): Historians and "scholars" have the misconception that if a text is ancient it should be taken as true. But then they twist everything so that if something in an ancient text is uncomfortable for the official versions, they will impose the content as if it were "mythology" when they are real facts, or vice versa. They will invent stories and events that they documented to fulfill an agenda but never happened and that they impose as true.

If that's what they're doing today in front of everyone with inventions like the plandemic, what makes them think they haven't done it before? History is to control people with convenient lies.

Gosia: Ok, but look at our two questions above Athena. It's just that what terrestrial historians do doesn't matter. It is understood that they falsify yes. But shouldn't your ships already have records of previous jumps saved, or the Federation itself having files of everything that has happened?

Swaruu X (Athena): There are and they are used, but they only record certain important events and a crew then assumes the data is correct.

An example of this that does not correspond is a jump that I made with my mother when I was little, when we went to see the events around the construction of Hadrian's Wall, in Scotland, in Roman times, from where we only flew to other parts of Europe only to see that simultaneously what would correspond to Renaissance paintings or the Renaissance was being developed there, with an error of about 1500 years in the gravity maps and in the historical terrestrial ones since it does not correspond.

What really happened is hidden in the basements of those who control Earth. That is why historically there has been the burning of books all the time, insisting that they do not destroy the information but only the copies and the originals are taken to the Vatican. Without doubting that in many cases the lackeys of the Cabal have destroyed books and documents for copying what their masters do, without first seeing if there are copies or without first sending them to the Vatican or their bosses.

Gosia: Why not? Registry errors?

Swaruu X (Athena): That adds to the problem making it worse.

Gosia: So maybe Jesus existed.

Swaru X (Athena): Noo that if not, there is no point more explored than that on Earth.

Gosia: It's just that you also have a temporary slip and all that. You don't have equal time progression. Everything is messed up

Robert: So you didn't see anything? But that wall does exist.

Swaruu X (Athena): We saw how they were building that wall. But at the same time in France the renaissance was happening.

Robert:

Swaruu X (Athena): That wall, yes.

Robert: How strange. The Romans building the wall and the French in the Renaissance. That may be?

Swaruu X (Athena): It is not strange, it is only testimony that history is not as they are told, nor did things happen in that order. That is my point here. From the year circa 120 to 122 that was built. Whereas if you go to Paris they were there with baroque music and renaissance paintings.

Robert: But how can that be possible?

Swaruu X (Athena): It's what I've been explaining here for half an hour.

Robert: No timeline of things?

Swaruu X (Athena): The chronology of things is wrong. I don't even have the "correct" one, but from experience plus what Yázhi says, I conclude that there isn't, even. Time is semi linear.

Robert: But weren't there commercial ties between "Great Britain" and France?

Swaruu X (Athena): There is only one sequence of events that transcends the lifetime of a person or a generation because they live it. Yes, it is recorded in some way, such as dated documents that preserve the linearity and sequence of events. But if these dates are misspelled, or falsified on the premise that no one will find out, then temporal linearity is broken. There can only be a temporal linearity to today's perception if there are documents or anything that indicates age or time by reference. But if you alter and lie in those documents, then all linearity is broken, because you have no frame of comparison. Because time is a perception.

Gosia: What kind of reference? That's what I was referring to above... that a lot of references were not already made before, that they would already be registered? And what type are they?

Swaruu X (Athena): Documents that are taken for truth just because they are official. Whether or not they are ancient. As well as dating objects. But they are dating objects mostly using Carbon 14, a method that has already been shown on Earth to throw so many bugs that it is basically useless!

If the Carbon 14 dating method is known to be so inaccurate, why is it still used? Which makes me think that it is a kind of "PCR test" for historical objects to force them to enter -into- an official narrative!

If you refer to the records of other Federation ships, I insist based on the number of references of historical event-year correlation with frequency maps, I see that clearly there are not many points in history that have been recorded or "mapped" that lends itself to simple navigation errors.

Perception of those who live it, but if today's people did not live through the renaissance, or have no memory of it, they can only believe that what the documents tell them is true. But as I have already said

Robert: And everything to follow an agenda...

Swaruu X (Athena): Another thing I noticed is that according to my mom's records, most recent in Suzy's databanks, trips she took after the disclosure in her "line", she finds that the old testament and the Sumerian tablets that support it, Dead Sea Scrolls and all, were written and made after the New Testament written by Vespasian and his psychopathic son Titus.

But... How can you even believe that you can divulge that in a video?!

Robert: Yes, you can.

Swaru X (Athena) :Another example of this is the Holy Shroud that even humans find was made in the Middle Ages and not at the time of Jesus... unless, as I say, the person on the shroud, printed there, lived in the Middle Ages. Corroborating what I tell you.

Robert: Yes. Because of the pollen and all that.

Gosia: But the Federation does this? Because I mean the references of the Federation. Good analogy of PCR for historical objects. I find that strange, that this has not been done.

Robert: Sure. We would also have to define what historical events are.

Swaru X (Athena): Who does this? It is very difficult to know. But the problem may simply come from the same interests of the governments on Earth and their rulers in power at all times, each imposing their own narrative that interests them to fulfill their personal interests. With this, destroying the historical linearity that precedes it. And this without even having in mind to confuse the story, but simply that the things where he lives and at the moment in which said person with power lives are accommodated to what he wants at the moment.

An example of this is the addition of 300 years that the Vatican imposed on the Gregorian calendar, basically jumping from the year 700 to the year 1000. However, this is only one of many events of the same nature, some more serious, that have happened. It's just the most documented. However, I must emphasize that other scholars of that event indicate different years to the sum, some saying that it was from the year 722 to the year 1000, others that what they added was longer.

But for whatever reason the end result is that the official story doesn't even remotely fit the sequence of events that can be corroborated in another way. Form that can also be wrong.

Robert: Do you know why they did it? I don't want to get off topic. That corroborates that the story is a hoax.

Swaru X (Athena): It is assumed that they added those nearly 300-"ish" years to the Gregorian calendar for reasons of economic convenience over inheritance rights to certain lands in Italy and France. Because a certain dynasty was supposed to have rights to those lands until the year 1000 and those in power for their own economic and power interests added those nearly 300-"ish" years to the calendar simply for seizing said lands.

It is also said that it has to do with population control where it was falsely imposed that the year 1000 was being reached, therefore the end of time, thereby altering and draining the population of resources. Because they thought the world was ending.

What "smells" again like an excuse to make a new reset, one of many that have been. Because they are not necessarily big resets, but many small local ones, which further confuses the linearity of the story.

Furthermore, if it is known that just for their economic convenience they added about 300-"ish" years to the Gregorian calendar, how can we not think that they have done it multiple times before and after, only it was not as noticeable because they did it "better" or with "more care"? And then you wonder why the story doesn't fit?

Robert: Sure. And people who don't even ask, only believe the official media.

Swaru X (Athena): The official story was only written and imposed to control people and give it a believable context. But it has nothing to do with what really happened.

Gosia: Ok thanks. And look at this last question : but if the events are falsified or not, why would you care if you operate with the above data on these events and according to the data on these events registered by the Federation? What I mean, that the information that these events are falsified is something important for humans, but for you upstairs would it matter?^[1]_[SEP]

You are not going to travel according to the events recorded on Earth but yours, recorded by the Federation right? I don't know if I explain myself. If I go to the Amazon, I am not going to go with maps that they have of the area, but with my own (not a very good example). Although I think you have more or less responded by saying that you do not have many records. Or the Federation does not have.

Swaruu X (Athena): It is necessary to take into account that for the Federation, that is to say for the races that compose it, the Earth is only one place of billions (without exaggeration) so to see and carry out the historical mapping of humanity - whether they care or not - ultra-detailed frequency maps are needed, which they simply don't have. In that case my predecessors were pioneers in this.

Namely, There are and always have been maps for frequencies of events on Earth, but simply not enough detail to see this problem.

That is, they will travel to see the construction of Hadrian's Wall in Scotland in the year 122. But they only go as they go and do not explore what happens in the rest of the world on that "date" assuming that everything is as they are told. officially, officially for the Federation and officially for or according to human records.

Then they arrive, they see Romans moving stones. And they assume it's the year 122 and leave. Then they go to rebirth, let's say 1560. And they assume where they were before was 122 and they don't realize it happens simultaneously.

Robert: Sure because time is not linear. Everything happens at the same time.

Swaru X (Athena): That the temporary jump in the ship was not necessary, but only to move as a simple jet from Scotland to Paris.

Robert: It is simultaneous yes.

Gosia: Not that everything happens simultaneously, I don't see it that way, no (although from above yes). Simply because the sequence is not as linear as it is understood according to records. Or is it wrong.

Swaruu X (Athena): Yes, but if you don't have memory of previous lives, as humans don't, they can only be based on documents to give meaning and linearity to things. And those documents are not reliable at all. If the official history said that the Romans were Renaissance, it would be accepted.

Robert: I understand that everything is simultaneous.

Gosia: From Yazhi level yes. But the fact that now I have Bongo and before I didn't, it's not happening simultaneously. You can go back to my life before I had Bongo. So there is a certain chronology.

Swaruu X (Athena): It's that from higher up, yes, everything is simultaneous. Even so, from the perception of life, yes, there is a linearity.

Gosia: Yes. There is and there is not. At once. And that IS simultaneous.

Swaruu X (Athena): And the revival can't be at the same time as the Romans in Britain. Nor can it be that the old testament was written after the new testament. However, empirical experience demonstrates this.

Robert: So what is happening? You have already explained it above.

Gosia: Many things are captured... and then they are separated by agendas, or invented, or time itself shapes the events in everyone's perception.

Robert: Yes. But they weren't right?

Swaruu X (Athena): No, but it doesn't fit the story either. There's something else going on here and it's very complex, involving fractured timelines because it's just people's consciousness, and in this case who saw the existence of Romans and Renaissance simultaneously. The perception in this case of my mom and me.

It is believed that a historical progression is needed. There can be no Renaissance France without things having happened that have brought them to that point, going through the time of the Roman occupation of Gaul. And this is true. A situation or a time must come from somewhere, by inheritance.

However, these inheritances were not given as explained in the official history books. There are huge holes. Impossible to believe like the two I have described above.

So this brings us to the big question: What to believe then? What can be believed? What do we have left to believe? Because this affects both the inhabitants of the Earth as well as those of us who, not being human, visit and are involved in any way with the Earth.

The answer is that nothing can be believed, and that we fall into the same thing again. They will have to be done at their own discretion, each one with the best available data.

Gosia: Perhaps that is why I was never very interested in history, as if inside I always sensed that all this is only in human perceptions, something imposed, something that is not really known if it has happened or not, and how it has happened. They say that understanding history is very important, well I don't know, for me it was never so important. All so smooth. And so many versions of realities, all coming together in the singularity of now, which is where it really matters. Everything is in the mind. The existence of everything and its non-existence. equally influencing. I find it hard to explain this feeling.

Swaruu X (Athena): Yes.

In short, just always keep in mind that history was not only written by the victors, but was also invented at the convenience of the people in power to fulfill their personal interests and agendas.

Robert: I understand, yes. When the Spanish arrived in America they also found another culture that seemed to live in another time. Like older.

Swaruu X (Athena): Now Singularity: Yes exactly. As Yázhi explains, all the past, all the temporal lines, or whatever you want to call them, the true, the false, what happened "in other lines", everything converges in a single point to form it, the whole set and the sum from all that mass it forms a single point, the now.

Gosia: Yes. That's how I perceive it. That's why even analyzing if something existed or not, it doesn't appeal to me so much. Just the uniqueness of now.

Swaruu X (Athena): And the uniqueness of YOU now. It is that you cannot know.

Robert: Yes, but that "past" whether real or false somehow defines you now.

Swaruu X (Athena): Yes, however as Yázhí says, the sequence doesn't matter, everything adds up. $3+20+34 = 57$ as well as $34+3+20$ add up to 57.

Gosia: Yes, it defines, whether it is real or not. So, does it really matter to know? If EVERYTHING influences?

Robert: Knowing what really happened, how can this change you now? Or does it not change it?

Gosia: Yes, exactly! That's what I mean. This is my very deep feeling.

Swaruu X (Athena): The order doesn't matter. The Universe works mathematically, not by simple cause and effect.
